New school finds basics mesh with modern technology

The new business school in downtown Scranton and Honesdale, the Northeast Institute of Education, is combining a "back to basics" approach with the most modern technology and the students are responding in a most positive way.

When interviewing a prospective student, Northeast Institute emphasizes that it is training people to enter the world of business. This orientation to what business is, and what it expects the student to do, is the key to the school's success.

The school's curriculum is designed to be practical and to provide the student with the skills and knowledge needed to enter the business world. The school's faculty is composed of experienced business professionals who are able to provide the student with the most up-to-date information on business practices and trends.

The school's facilities are modern and well-equipped, providing the student with the same environment as they will find in the business world. The school's location in downtown Scranton and Honesdale provides the student with easy access to the business community.

The school's success is a result of its commitment to providing the student with the best possible education. The school's faculty, facilities, and location all work together to provide the student with the skills and knowledge needed to enter the business world.

NIE accepts Miss Hamlyn

Miss Debbie Hamlyn, daughter of Walter and Margaret Sheldahl Hamlyn, R.D. 1, Waymart, has been notified that she has been accepted at the Northeast Institute of Education for the fall term.
